A DRINK IN MAINE.

Eben W. Sears of Lynn has returned from his vacation in Lewiston, Me., with a remarkable tale of the way liquor is served in the prohibition state. Sears says that a friend took him into a place where several men were drinking and ordered some beer. The room was without furniture or fixtures, save for one table, a few chairs and the gas jets.

While Sears was wondering where the beer was to come from, the proprietor stepped to a gas jet and turned it on, whereat the amber fluid flowed forth as from the spigot of a keg. The proprietor filled the glasses of Sears and his friend, and then for two other customers drew forth two mugs of ale from another gas jet. After that he produced a glass of whisky from a third jet.

Seeing that there were several more gas jets in the room, Sears, as a test of the proprietor's resources, was about to call for a Martini cocktail, when suddenly there were alarms and scurrings without, followed by a noise like a squad of liquor deputies.

Instantly the proprietor sprang to a corner and pressed an invisible button. Wondering what the effect of this might be, Sears turned on the beer gas jet, but nothing came forth.

"The gas is shut off," said the proprietor with a wink. Sears was unable to learn where the liquor came from. He says he thinks the proprietor had tanks in the walls.—Boston Herald.

WITH APOLOGIES.

In the subway, oh, my darling,
When the lights are dim and low;
And the evening hordes of people
Wildly come and wildly go.
In the subway, oh, my darling,
Think not bitterly of me,
Though I slid into an end seat,
Left you lonely—set you free.
For my hat was crushed and battered,
My cravat a sight to see;
It was best to leave you thus, dear,
Best for you and best for me.
